BAROQUE

BIOGRAPHY

- Johann Sebastian Bach was a child prodigy of music, born in Eisenach, Germany, in 1685. He was the eighth of ten children of a local church organist and violinist.
- He spent most of his early life as an organist and teacher in Arnstadt. He played the organ for various church services, and taught music at the St. Thomas School.
- Bach was a devoted family man. He had many children, and his wife, Maria Barbara, was a talented pianist and singer. He often wrote music for his family.
- Bach's music is characterized by its complexity and technical skill. He was a master of the keyboard, and his compositions are often technically demanding.
- He was a devout Lutheran, and his music often reflected his religious beliefs. He wrote many church cantatas, and his Masses and Passions are some of his most important works.

FUN FACTS

- He was a very busy man. Bach wrote an average of one new piece of music every week, and he often worked on several pieces at once.
- He was a very organized man. He kept a detailed record of his compositions, and he often wrote out his music in a very clear and legible hand.
- He was a very generous man. He often gave his students and friends copies of his music, and he often helped them with their studies.
- He was a very humble man. He never considered himself a great composer, and he often wrote music for his own enjoyment.
- He was a very hardworking man. He often worked long hours, and he was always striving to improve his craft.
- He was a very influential man. His music has inspired generations of composers, and it is still one of the most popular and beloved pieces of music in the world.
